Clinton bestowed honor at Constitution Center

Liberty Medal. Hillary Clinton received the award yesterday for her dedication to the Constitution and women's rights.

For Hillary Rodham Clinton, it's just another first. While she became the third woman to receive the prestigious Liberty Medal, she is the first former female Secretary of State and former first lady to receive the honor.

Former Florida Gov. Jeb Bush, a Republican, was supposed to present the medal to the former U.S. Senator and First Lady of United States, a Democrat, but instead Constitution Center President Jeff Rosen bestowed the honor. Both Bush and Clinton have been linked to possible presidential runs in 2016.

The Liberty Medal, which was presented for the 25th consecutive time, was awarded to Clinton in recognition of her "exemplary commitment to furthering the constitutional ideals of liberty and equality, in particular, among her many achievements, Secretary Clinton has made the rights of women and girls a global priority and she has championed freedom of speech on the Internet," Rosen said.

Clinton took to the stage after receiving her medal yesterday.

"All men are created equal, but ... all women are created more than equal."

Mayor Michael Nutter
Addressing how Hillary Clinton has changed perceptions of women

Throughout her 15-minute speech, Clinton, 65, repeatedly cited historical figures and their abilities to work together to solve problems and resolve conflicts.

She said historical figures such as George Washington and Benjamin Franklin knew that "In a democracy, citizens cannot sit on the sidelines, that we have to get into the arena, as Teddy Roosevelt called it.

"And participate in the debates that shape our country's future," she said.

And sometimes, she added, sometimes it can get a bit noisy.

"But that is the American way," she said. "It's right in a democracy for us to debate, for us to disagree — forcefully, even. It's what distinguishes us from authoritarian societies where dissent is forbidden."

Today, she said, we are once again in the middle of some big, noisy debates.

What are the demands of America's global leadership in a changing world? How do we respond when international rules of the road are violated? How do we provide both security and liberty, at home and abroad?

"Every era faces its own questions, and has to fashion its own answers," she said. "And we are no different."

Clinton acknowledged the conflict in Syria, the Middle Eastern country in the midst of a civil war, which garnered national attention after a lethal chemical attack against men, women and children was reported in a suburb of its capital city, Damascus, on Aug. 21.

"That violates a universal norm at the heart of our global order," she said. "Yet it demands a strong response from the international community led by the United States."

She said the debate on whether Syria's president should be reprimanded for his use of chemical weapons on civilians and have those weapons taken, is yet another example of debate that "is good for our democracy."

"As our founders knew," she said, "fervent arguments are the life blood of self-government."

As secretary of state, traveling around the globe, Clinton said she saw first-hand how American unity, "leads to strength, but discord leads to perceived weakness."

"In our finest moments of any era, we achieve great things and provide a model of democracy that inspires people everywhere," she said. "But when we let partisanship override citizenship, when we fail to make progress on the challenges facing our people here at home, our standing in the world suffers."

Tea party group awards own medal

Groups protested outside the event. / METRO

A newly formed conservative group, dubbed the Independence Hall Foundation, crashed Hillary Clinton's party.

The group held a press conference on the Independence Mall lawn across from the Constitution Center ceremony yesterday in which foundation members announced its inception and awarded its own medal — the 2013 Defender of Liberty Medal — posthumously to four people who "made grave sacrifices to uphold and defend the United States Constitution."

Co-founder Terri Adams said awarding Clinton the Liberty Medal on the eve of the anniversary of the attack on the U.S. diplomatic post in Benghazi, Libya, in 2012 is inappropriate.

The four recipients of the medal are Ambassador Chris Stevens, Foreign Service Officer Sean Smith and Navy SEALs Tyrone Woods and Glen Doherty.

The group claims to honor "Independence Hall as the physical and symbolic foundation of the American nation."

City Council gears up for new legislative term

Politics. As City Council prepares to convene for the first time this year, members share what's on their agendas.

Additional ambitions

Councilman Kenyatta Johnson will introduce a bill prohibiting the manufacture of firearms using three-dimensional printers.

- Councilman Bobby Henon said he will this term propose a series of bills making changes to contractor licensing and the Department of Licenses and Inspections.
- To see more, visit www.metro.us.

As City Council gets ready for tomorrow's first full session this term, some Council members are already getting their legislative priorities in order.

"The main thing we'll be introducing on Thursday is a charter change for interest arbitration awards, which are the binding arbitration awards for the police, fire and paramedics," said Jim Engler, legislative director to Councilman Jim Kenney.

The bill, which firefighters union Local 22 held a petition drive this summer to bring before Council, would require the mayor to gain the approval of City Council before appealing binding arbitration awards. "It basically gives Council oversight of the mayor spending money appealing binding arbitration awards," Engler said.

"School funding is a major issue of mine: how we're going to work that out in a sustainable method to have a constant flow of income and to support the District."
Squilla

Councilman Dennis O'Brien will tomorrow take aim at a recent city request for proposal seeking a one-year contract with a single law firm to provide representation to clients who have a conflict of interest precluding them from using a public defender in a bill co-sponsored by Councilman Bill Greenlee calling for investigative hearings into the development.

"It's problematic for many reasons, but one of the most important reasons is the quality of representation that some of these folks will receive can be severely compromised," said O'Brien's Chief of Staff Matthew Brayden.

Councilman Mark Squilla said two of his main priorities are school funding and mitigating the impact of AVI; he plans to tomorrow introduce a bill that would allow residents or businesses that have appealed their new property tax assessment to pay last year's taxes until their appeal has been heard.

Escaped convict nabbed after lengthy chase

Speed. Delaware police arrested an escaped convict after he allegedly stole a truck and led officers on a chase.

Humbertson
DELAWARE STATE POLICE

Delaware State Police on Monday arrested Mark Humbertson, 18, after he allegedly escaped from a Central Violation of Probation Center work crew around noon and led officials on a multi-agency vehicle pursuit in a stolen box truck from Dover to New Castle County.

Investigators said after Humbertson's escape, he stole a fully loaded handgun, ammunition and a Chevrolet box truck from two Townsend homes. Troopers around 10 p.m. spotted the vehicle heading north on U.S. 13 near the Delaware State Police headquarters in Dover and attempted to conduct a vehicle stop, sparking a chase.

Police were able to successfully deploy Stop Stick devices and deflate both front tires of the truck, but Humbertson allegedly continued toward the St. Georges Bridge, riding on two front rims. Officials said he slammed into an unoccupied police vehicle at the south end of the bridge, then came to a stop on the bridge's top.

But when officers exited their vehicles in an attempt to arrest Humbertson, he suddenly put the truck in reverse and backed up at a high rate of speed, ramming a second police car, according to authorities.

Several officers shot multiple rounds from their handguns into the truck, but Humbertson allegedly continued to drive north to the base of the bridge. There, he crashed into a guardrail and finally stopped. Police arrested Humbertson and recovered the stolen handgun.

Councilman: Cut ties with sister city

City Councilman Jim Kenney yesterday delivered a letter to Mayor Michael Nutter urging him to sever ties with Philadelphia's Russian sister city Nizhny Novgorod, which introduced a ban on "homosexual propaganda" that was extended nationwide.

Kenney said in a release he believes "as the cradle of liberty," the city "cannot sit idly by without expressing our indignation and opposition to this clear and direct targeting of LGBTQ citizens in Russia."

"Have we not learned from our recent history, that silence often times equals death?" he continued. "We cannot and should not – and I for one – will not remain silent!"

Man charged with sex assault in robberies

Gunpoint. Police say a 21-year-old man held up four women in separate incidents.

The District Attorney's Office on Monday charged 21-year-old Marquise Wakefield with attempted rape, robbery and related offenses in connection with three separate gunpoint robberies Sunday involving four different women.

Investigators said the robberies occurred on the 400 block of Pine Street in Society Hill and on the 4800 block of Chester Avenue in Squirrel Hill, with the victims ranging in age from 14 to 25 years old.

Wakefield / PPD

Wakefield, of the 6000 block of Regent Street in Southwest Philadelphia, was arraigned shortly before 5:15 p.m. and bail was set at 10 percent of $3 million.

He is charged with four counts each of simple assault, making terroristic threats and possessing an instrument of crime; three counts each of robbery with the infliction of serious bodily injury, theft, receiving stolen property and reckless endangerment; and one count each of attempted rape, sexual assault, burglary, criminal trespassing, unlawful restraint, false imprisonment, attempted robbery, attempted theft and attempting to receive stolen property.

Wakefield is next due in court Sept. 26 for a preliminary hearing in the robberies involving the adult victims and on Sept. 27 for a preliminary hearing in the robbery involving the juvenile victim. METRO

Obama to pressure Syria amid diplomacy push

Talks. President Obama headed to the Capitol to visit Senate Democrats and Republicans.

Top Obama administration officials urged Congress yesterday to keep the pressure on Syria over its chemical weapons arsenal while the United States explores a diplomatic alternative to military strikes.

The potential diplomatic breakthrough put the brakes on a planned vote in Congress on the authorization of military force, as lawmakers and the administration sought more time to assess Russia's proposal to put Syria's chemical weapons under international control.

President Barack Obama has faced stiff resistance in Congress to any military action, and lawmakers on both sides of the issue were quick to seize on the Russian proposal as a possible way out, even as more proclaimed their opposition to U.S. strikes.

A group of Republican and Democratic U.S. senators began drafting a modified resolution on the use of military force that would give the United Nations time to take control of Syria's chemical weapons.

Secretary of State John Kerry and Defense Secretary Chuck Hagel told Congress the threat of military action was critical to forcing Syrian President Bashar al-Assad to bend on his chemical weapons. REUTERS

Boehner: Obama needs to bolster case

House Speaker John Boehner, a Republican who has announced he would back a strike, said the American people still did not support military action in Syria, calling for Obama to make a stronger case in his televised speech Tuesday night.

The president has said Assad needs to be held accountable for an Aug. 21 gas attack that killed more than 1,000 civilians, including hundreds of children.

White House spokesman Jay Carney said Obama would claim credit for the potential diplomatic breakthrough in the speech. "We see this as potentially a positive development, and we see this as a clear result of the pressure that has been put on Syria," Carney said on MSNBC of the Russian proposal.

Kerry told lawmakers Obama and Russian President Vladimir Putin discussed the approach last week during the G20 summit and Obama "directed us to try to continue to talk and see if it is possible."

Intel makes tiny chips for Dick Tracy-style gadgets

Intel is working on a new line of ultra-small and ultra-low-power microchips for wearable devices like smart watches and bracelets, a bid by the company to make sure it will be at the crest of the next big technology wave after arriving late to the smartphone and tablet revolution.

The new line of chips, called Intel Quark, will ship next year and include an ingestible version aimed at biomedical uses, Intel President Renee James told reporters late on Monday.

The Quark chips will be five times smaller and 10 times more power efficient than Intel's Atom chips for tablets and smartphones, she said.

To 5c or not to 5c: Which iPhone will work for you?

Choice. Two new iPhones — 5c and 5s — debut. Each comes with its own advantages.

The new iPhone 5c is displayed during an Apple product announcement at the Apple campus yesterday in Cupertino, Calif. / GETTY IMAGES

Though Apple's announcement yesterday was far from a surprise due to the amount of leaked information, consumers applauded the arrival of the two newest iPhones.

The iPhone 5c contains all the existing technology of the iPhone 5, but in five bright colors: lime green, pure white, robin's egg blue, coral and bright yellow. Despite being made of a seamless hard plastic, it won't be flimsy. It will be steel reinforced and contain a multi-band antenna.

The iPhone 5s will have a new A7 chip and come in silver, gold and dark gray. It will also be the first smartphone to be 64 bits, and will operate 40 times faster than the original iPhone.

It's expected to have a battery life that allows for 10 hours of LTE and Wi-Fi browsing, 40 hours of music and 250 hours of standby time.

It will also contain an M7 chip that will continuously measure motion data, as well as an accelerometer, compass and gyroscope — making it the perfect device for health and fitness apps.

The phone's camera will allow more light and have auto white balance and true tone flash. It will be able to capture everything in extreme detail with the new 1.5-micron pixel camera.

Controversial. Fierce opposition to a "disgusting" event on 9/11 has emerged.

The 12th anniversary commemorations of Sept. 11 terror attacks that killed nearly 3,000 people in the U.S. could be overshadowed by a rally in Washington against victimization of Muslims.

The American Muslim Political Action Committee listed "erosion of domestic civil liberties, drone policy ... illegal tapping and surveilling," among its reasons for the action.

"We are not trying to be controversial," MD Rabbi Alam, AMPAC founder and Senate candidate in Missouri, told Metro. "It is on this date to show solidarity for the people killed. We are Americans standing up for American values — people need to know that Muslims are being mistreated."

The view is supported by human rights groups, with the American Civil Liberties Union stating: "In the wake of 9/11 [...] no area of American Muslim civil society has been left untouched by discriminatory and illegitimate government action."

However, the rally's organizers are under fire for promoting 9/11 conspiracy theories, with both Alam and AMPAC spokesman Dr. Kevin Barrett suggesting it was an inside job. Barrett runs Truthjihad.com, which "takes on the big 9/11 lie put forth by our government."

Joe Connor, whose brother died on 9/11, branded the march "ridiculous" and "disgusting." A rival group is dispatching a mass convoy of motorcyclists to Washington — "2 million bikers to DC" — to challenge the march.

Newlyweds. Woman charged with shoving husband off park cliff

A Montana woman was charged on Monday with killing her husband of eight days by pushing him off a cliff at Glacier National Park during an argument and after expressing doubts about the marriage, court records show.

Jordan Graham, 22, was charged with second-degree murder in U.S. District Court in Missoula stemming from the July 7 death of her husband, Cody Johnson, 25, of Kalispell.

Johnson was reported missing to Kalispell police on July 8. Graham told officers her husband had texted her the evening of July 7 to say he was going for a drive with friends and that she believed he was in a dark-colored car that pulled out of the couple's driveway that night, according to legal documents.

Graham on July 11 reported to emergency dispatchers at Glacier National Park that she had found her husband's body below a steep hiking path. It was not immediately clear how far he had fallen.

Graham later admitted to authorities that she had lied about Johnson's death and that she had shoved him off a cliff during an argument while hiking, according to a sworn statement by FBI Special Agent Steven Liss.

Graham said Johnson grabbed her arm during the dispute.

"Graham stated she could have just walked away, but due to anger, she pushed Johnson with both hands in the back and as a result, he fell face first off the cliff," Liss said in the affidavit.

Graham and Johnson were married on June 29. Soon after the wedding, Graham told a friend that she was having second thoughts about marrying him, Liss said. REUTERS

Man tricked girlfriend into taking abortion drug

A Florida man has pleaded guilty to switching his pregnant girlfriend's antibiotic with a drug known to cause abortion.

John Andrew Welden, 28, pleaded guilty in Tampa federal court on Monday to reduced charges of tampering with a consumer product resulting in bodily injury and conspiracy to commit mail fraud.

The plea agreement does not require proof that the prescription drug Cytotec actually caused Remee Jo Lee to miscarry, but Welden admitted he tricked her into taking the drug because he hoped it would end the pregnancy.

Cytotec carries a warning that it should not be used during pregnancy because it can cause abortion and birth defects. REUTERS

California wildfire destroys 80 structures

A fast-moving wildfire in northern California has destroyed 80 structures and damaged 30 others, and more than 500 residents of a small community were told to evacuate ahead of the flames, fire officials said yesterday.

The fire, which broke out Monday afternoon, has charred 7,400 acres near Happy Valley, some 200 miles north of San Francisco, said Mike Witesman, spokesman for the California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection. REUTERS

We check in with some of Hollywood's biggest names to see what they've been up to — in their own words, in 140 characters or fewer.

Today, Channing Tatum is feeling very popular, Bob Saget is rediscovering old memories, Kirstie Alley is not terribly comfortable and Seth MacFarlane is asking the tough questions.

@channingtatum: Thanks Twitterverse for the follows! 5 Million strong and grateful for all of you.

@bobsaget: I didnt remember how I lost my virginity til @JohnStamos talked me through it for his new web series 'Losing It.'

@kirstiealley: soooo...I made the grave mistake of wearing very high, very painful shoes to film in today...oh my God Im in hell!!!!!

@SethMacFarlane: When Dudley Moore switched bodies with Kirk Cameron in "Like Father Like Son", why didn't Kirk Cameron have an English accent?

The Situation gives Snooki tips for 'DWTS'

Mike "The Situation" Sorrentino wishes nothing but the best for his former "Jersey Shore" roomie Nicole "Snooki" Polizzi's turn on the new season of "Dancing with the Stars" — but he does wonder if she's got what it takes to last in the competition. "I don't know if she's gonna be able to do four rounds, because I did four rounds of 'Dancing with the Stars' when I went and it's not as easy as she thinks," the reality star told Metro on Tuesday, during a discussion about his addiction to prescription painkillers (more on that in an upcoming issue). The new mom can at least count on some votes from her former smoosh buddy: "I will be watching, I will be voting, but I don't know if she's gonna go four rounds," he says.

Jane Lynch is paying a hefty alimony

JANE LYNCH
JASON MERRITT

Now that gay marriage is legal, gay divorces are a very real, very expensive thing. Case in point? Jane Lynch's divorce from Lara Embry, which is shaping up to be a pricey one indeed. The "Glee" star is reportedly being asked to pay more than $90,000 per month in spousal support to Embry for an annual total of $1.1 million, according to TMZ. A document filed last week lists monthly expenses including $12,000 for entertainment, $5,000 for charitable donations and $4,500 for meals at restaurants, though $59,909 of the amount requested is meant to go toward "unknown" expenses. The pair separated earlier this summer after three years of marriage. Lynch seems OK with the development, at least, telling a photographer outside a West Hollywood cafe, "I think it's the law, isn't it? I think it's the law, so I go with the law." Way to take it on the chin, Jane.

Talking points

Franco: 'I wish I was gay'

James Franco wasn't bothered by all the gay jokes hurled his way at his recent Comedy Central roast. In fact, he welcomes them. "Bring on the gay jokes," he tells the Daily Beast. "Because these aren't insults at all. I don't even care if people think I'm gay, so it was like, 'Awesome!' I mean, I wish I was ... I wish I was gay."

Knightley sings for role

Keira Knightley isn't one to shy away from a challenge, so when she was asked to sing for her latest film, "Can a Song Save Your Life?" she dove right in. But once is apparently enough. "I literally was given the songs for this about a week before we started shooting," she tells E! News. "We had to go straight into the studio, and I had never sung before. I'm not going to do it again, that was it."

Cyrus smashes records with 'Wrecking Ball'

Sorry, One Direction. Sorry, Syria. Sorry, New York City mayoral race. Sorry, 12th anniversary of 9/11. It's all Miley, all the time. The singer's new video for "Wrecking Ball," where she rides on a wrecking ball in boy underwear (or nothing at all!) and cries a lot and wags her tongue, is breaking page view records with a whopping 15 million views in less than 24 hours, according to video host Vevo.

"Wrecking Ball has officially beat the @VEVO record. ?????????thank you smilerzzzzz" she tweeted. The former record was held by British boy band One Direction with 10.9 million views for "Best Song Ever." But then again, they kept their clothes on.

Everyone loves George Clooney

So, basically, who doesn't have a crush on George Clooney? Next in line is Sandra Bullock's 3-year-old son, Louis. "My son thinks he's a very cool dude," she told reporters at the Toronto International Film Festival while promoting "Gravity," her new film with Clooney for director Alfonso Cuaron. "If there's a choice between me [and] George and Alfonso, my son will leave me to be with George and these guys. He's a boy's boy, so he has to go talk to the men."

The longest show on earth

Anne Gridley and Gabel Eiben take the stage in "Life and Times."
REINHARD WERNER

Theater. Got 12 and a half hours to kill? There's a Fringe show with your name on it.

When Pavol Liska asked Kristin Worrall, a member of his theater company, Nature Theater of Oklahoma, to tell him her life story, he expected the conversation to last a couple of hours. He'd undertaken similar projects in the past, asking acquaintances to recall the stories of "Romeo and Juliet" and "Rambo," which he then transcribed and turned into offbeat theater pieces. But Worrall proceeded to stretch her 34 years over 10 phone calls lasting more than 16 hours.

The resulting pieces, "Life and Times: Episodes 1-5," will be staged by Nature Theater of Oklahoma (which, seven years after the conversations were recorded, still counts Worrall as a member) as part of this year's FringeArts festival in a single marathon 12-and-a-half-hour performance — and it's still only half finished. (For those of a weaker constitution, the episodes are also being performed individually over four evenings, which began last night.)

By creating a show of such a monumental duration, Liska says, "the primary drama happens in the performance itself. The drama is an actual drama rather than a fictional drama that's in the story. The audience is able to witness the fatigue and decay on stage while they experience their own fatigue and decay."

"The responsibility for entertaining them goes away after a while," he adds. "There's nothing I could possibly make that would keep everybody entertained for 12 and a half hours, and I hope people don't expect that."

Quoted

"There's nothing I could possibly make that would keep everybody entertained for 12 and a half hours, and I hope people don't expect that." Liska of the play is ameliorated by the fact that each of the five episodes is rendered as a completely different genre, from a musical to a locked-room mystery to an animated film and even an illustrated manuscript distributed to the audience. And the company also serves food during the breaks — barbecue was served after episode one, and hot chocolate sends everyone home happy.

"Making hamburgers is just as important to us as choreography," Liska says. "For us, making theater is a social event. It's not just about the art. We're inviting people to come and have this experience with us. You get to know your neighbor in the seat next to you, get to know their reactions and what they're experiencing and realize it's different from [your experience]. It's very important that the audience understands that we think of them as an important part of the equation."

Prostate Health Assessment Event

The Kimmel Cancer Center at Jefferson and Prostate Health International's Gary Papa Run are offering free prostate screenings as part of a research program. Prostate cancer is the second leading cause of cancer death among men. Screening is important because prostate cancer shows no symptoms in its earliest stages.

Many organizations recommend prostate health assessment as part of men's healthcare.

Free screenings, including a blood test for prostate specific antigen (PSA), testosterone and cholesterol and a digital rectal exam, will take place at the following two locations:

- Wednesday, September 18, 2013, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., at the Kimmel Cancer Center – Bodine Building, 111 South 11th Street, Center City
- Friday, September 27, 2013, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., at Jefferson at the Navy Yard – 3 Crescent Drive, Suite 100, South Philadelphia

Registration is required. To register for your free screenings, or for more information, call 1-800-JEFF-NOW.

SCOTT HAZE

The James Franco collaborator and "Child of God" star grants us his debut interview.

THE FIRST CUT IS THE DEEPEST

Dallas native Scott Haze has been pals with James Franco for quite a while, and even played a role in Franco's adaptation of William Faulkner's "As I Lay Dying." But they reach a new level of collaboration with "Child of God," based on Cormac McCarthy's novel, in which Haze stars. To prepare for the role, Haze moved to Tennessee, shunned society and lived in a cave for a time. He was far more social when we caught up with him by phone for his first-ever interview.

The work you did for this role — "intense" is putting it mildly.
Moving to Tennessee was a drastic thing, but I thought it was necessary to actually fully grasp what it would mean, to bring truthfulness to this character. The place in Tennessee that I moved to was in the middle of nowhere, actually where Cormac wrote the novel, so I wanted to go there to get it as authentic as possible. You know, being alone for that amount of time did something to me. [Laughs]

That's a luxury, getting to spend that much time preparing for a role.
Yeah, you normally don't get that much time. I knew that this was a passion project for James, and it's not every day an actor gets a role like that — because they're just not written. It's challenging. It has all the elements that you look for as an actor, that you can really sink your teeth into. Some roles you don't need to do that for, you don't need to move to Tennessee and sleep in caves, isolate yourself.

How is it for you taking this film to Toronto?
This movie is a special film in terms of how — how do I put it? For the attention that this movie is gaining, it makes me extremely excited because of how raw it is. I feel like it's a throwback to movies like "Taxi Driver" and movies where it's just storytelling. You don't have product placement in movies like this, so to go to Toronto with "Child of God" is an incredible, incredible thing to do.

You and James have adapted both Cormac McCarthy and William Faulkner. How do they compare as source material?
If you look at literature in terms of who really captured the South, the grandmaster, I believe, is Faulkner. These stories that Faulkner wrote really strip down the truth of what that time was like, and if you look at Cormac's work, Cormac is a lot like Faulkner in the sense of there's not a lot of stuff that isn't necessary. It's really raw, it's really honest, it's really truthful.

Next project

Adaptation

You and James are making "The Sound and the Fury" next.
It's going to be a blast. It doesn't get much better than that, for myself as an actor, to be involved in one of the greatest novels written, in my opinion.

The history of adult films

Stag. A filmmaker ponders why the topless actress is chasing a stork.

Frank Henenlotter's documentary looks at adult films before the emergence of hard-core porn. / PROVIDED

The man who would go on to direct such outrageous, sleazy-but-smart films as "Basket Case" and "Frankenhooker" began life as a good Catholic boy on Long Island – which, Frank Henenlotter says, explains a lot.

"Back in the '60s, there was this thing called the Legion of Decency," Henenlotter recalls, "and every year you had to take a pledge in church that you would never see a film that the Legion condemned, under the pain of mortal sin. I couldn't wait to see a condemned film. It was all I thought about."

The chance came via the deceptively named Fine Arts Theater, where the woman manning the box office was "so damn blind she had no idea who you were, what age you were and you could walk right in without showing any kind of proof." Henenlotter's first nudie film double feature was "Prowl Girls" and "House of Cats," neither of which is known to have survived, and he was hooked.

Henenlotter revisits that world in his documentary, "That's Sexploitation!," which recounts the raucous history of adult film in the decades prior to the emergence of hard-core porn. The film features hundreds of clips of bizarre silent shorts, nudie-cuties, stag reels and others.

"They're not something that most of the world are readily aware of," Henenlotter says. "They were once offensive, and now they're just plain silly. ... Each day that goes by takes the edge off them."

The film's narrator is the late David F. Friedman, a producer and "human encyclopedia" of the genre who was responsible for some of its most notable entries. But the true star is the endless parade of clips compiled by Henenlotter.

"A lot of my criteria was simply, 'How funny is this clip?'" he says. "Even if they don't make you laugh out loud, you sit there shaking your head saying, 'Did you see that? Why was a semi-naked girl wearing a scuba mask and flippers indoors? Why is that buxom, topless woman chasing a stork?'"

Who's moving out of Philly?

Relocation. A United Van Lines study shows that more people are moving out than in.

Moving company United Van Lines released a study looking at peak moving season. / UNITED VAN LINES

According to one of the biggest moving companies in the country, people are leaving Philadelphia. United Van Lines compiled data from its peak season, which runs May 1 to Aug. 31, and found that there were 7.2 percent more moves out of the city than into the city. "More than 30 percent of our moves happen then," says Melissa Sullivan, of Mayflower Transit, a sister company to United.

Those numbers only tell a portion of the story, since they're based on people who can afford to hire movers, or at least rent moving trucks for DIY relocations. But they have been increasing. "We've had 8.5 percent year-over-year growth," Sullivan says, referring to total moves, not Philadelphia moves (which were down from last year).

City residents shouldn't panic just yet. "We are the movers for 400 of the Fortune 500 companies," says Sullivan, shining more light on United Van Lines customers. "We also have a lot of military business moves and self-paid moves across state lines. These are not families who are relocating locally for a bigger house or a new job."

Seth Budick, policy and research manager at University City District, isn't worried about people fleeing. "Philadelphia's population, and in particular that of central Philadelphia, including University City, continues to grow, often dramatically," he says.

Of course, University City sees a lot of residential turnover, with students moving in and out of the neighborhood. Budick sees that as a plus for the area: "It helps to keep the neighborhood young, vibrant and exciting."

On the move

United Van Lines study breakdown:

- In 2013, there were 1,202 total moves in and out of the city of Philadelphia during peak season.
- Of those, 644 were moving outbound.
- In 2012, there were 1,324 total moves during peak season.
- Of those, 738 were outbound.

Style. This fall, your wardrobe isn't the only thing getting revamped.

First, Ikea released its sleek upscale Stockholm collection inspired by mid-century modern classics. H&M followed with the launch of their much-anticipated home line and e-commerce site — seriously, the copper candle holders and knit throws look straight out of a high-end boutique. Now, Crate and Barrel is leaving us no choice but to start hosting.

The furnishings brand partnered with renowned Italian interior designer Paola Navone — a wiz at creating funky, modern decor inspired by Asian and African handicrafts — for three collections, the first of which centers on "casual entertaining."

So what exactly do casual shindigs mean for Navone?

Based on the first installation — launching exclusively on Crateandbarrel.com this week — we'd say a packed dinner party with lots of good eats. The designer created tabletop essentials, including platters, bowls, cutlery sets and linens in electric blue-and-white patterns (inspired by the Mediterranean). Pops of red appear on industrial lights, and a woven chair with reclaimed teak legs adds warmth.

The collection also includes 11 dining table options, which you can mix and match with nine seating styles. Our favorite is the gray and white Como bench, with elegant backrest.

No one's leaving our table hungry — or with a backache.

Fashion Week: The bold and beautiful

Donna Karan

Donna Karan's clothes increasingly reference nature in some form or another. This collection works with a similar theme as another designer's I saw, Karen Walker — New York meets India — but the end result is different. Whereas Walker was dressing the hipster on that quarter-life crisis self-discovery mission in the East, Karan is speaking to the older woman who considers far-flung places a second home, whose wardrobe reflects her travels and worldview. There are sinewy dresses and sarong skirts, airy shirts and languorous outerwear. It's not Karan's most ground-breaking collection, but her loyalists probably won't care. KENYA HUNT

J.Crew / GETTY IMAGES

J.Crew pre-show

It's been 10 minutes since the doors opened and the venue is already over capacity. You'd think there was a Justin Timberlake/Jay-Z concert going on. TINA CHADHA

J.Crew

Before we even get to the clothes, let's discuss the spot-on styling and accessories. The models are wearing fun, hot pink pouts, cool sunnies and statement jewels, but the shoes stand out most. The first thing that catches my eye is a pair of tan cut-out booties with bead detailing. A quick scan of the room reveals many more lust-worthy pairs: quirky floral pumps, strappy tie-ups in rainbow colors and classic weave sling-backs, which all complement the collection of neon-bright sportswear and tailored classics here. California surfers coupled with imagery of turn-of-the-century Venetian coasts provided the jumping-off point for womenswear designer Tom Mora. That yielded looks a bit dressy, yet laid-back, in classic Jenna Lyons style. TINA CHADHA

Mint

Cost: Free

As we've all had pounded into our collective heads, now is not a great time to be a student. Debt has skyrocketed, and higher education largely exists to get the kind of fancy jobs that can pay back the school you attended to get said fancy job. It's more advisable to learn a blue collar trade that will prepare you for the looming apocalypse that will probably never happen.

But if you can't resist the call of continuing education — or, worse, if you've been stupid enough to get into a graduate program — you might as well exert the minimum amount of self-control. By that, we mean fiscal responsibility. Though Mint, an app that tracks your spending, can be used by all, it's of particular use to those essentially throwing digital money to the wind.

Mint hooks up with your various accounts to remind you how much you spend. Those expensive textbooks? Those "why not?" food truck trips you made? It tabulates it and throws it in your dumb face — and that's on top of all the student loans that pile up. Of course, even if you track every last cent, you'll still wind up broke.

This is what SelfControl looks like. Can you imagine two hours without Facebook, Tumblr or Flickr? Terrifying, isn't it? / PROVIDED

SelfControl

Cost: Free

Speaking of self-control, there's SelfControl, an app that blocks fun sites you'd rather visit than study or write papers. It's easier than ever before to be lured away from monstrously dense academic tomes. Yet papers have to be pounded out. SelfControl allows you, in a bout of logic, to schedule times for certain fun sites to be blocked, so that no one can drag you into the murk of comic book movie casting rumors and the like. On the flip side, it gives your followers/friends periodic breaks from tweets and status updates about how hard school is.

Denise Austin wants you to walk this way

Fitness. The exercise pro tells you how to turn your stroll around the block into a calorie-torching workout.

As a 30-year veteran of the fitness world, with over 100 instructional DVDs to her name, Denise Austin has likely seen every fitness trend out there. However, one workout routine that she swears by is one of the simplest forms of movement: walking.

For Austin, however, simple walking is not a complete workout. The fitness expert's latest DVD, "Fat Burning Walk" is a 30-minute program for home use. While you might not think of walking as a high cardio activity, Austin says you should reconsider.

"I keep the heart rate up for 30 minutes — that's when the fat starts burning," she says. "I take you through some intervals that pick up the speed. When you do all the moves, it's a great combo

Quoted

The DVD begins with a warm-up and ends with a cool down and, in between, there are exercises for arm toning, leg strengthening, butt sculpting and waist-whittling.

Austin says that anyone can do this kind of workout — even those who find exercise difficult. Also, unlike running and extreme interval training, the moves in "Fat Burning Walk" are easier on the joints.

"It's great for people who travel and want to keep up their exercise regime while they're away," Austin says.

Brief periods of exercise can prevent weight gain

Location of study: U.S.
Study subjects: Data study
Results: Brief periods of rigorous physical activity can prevent weight gain as effectively as the recommended 10-minute-plus intervals, says a new study in the American Journal of Health Promotion. People are encouraged to exercise at least 150 minutes per week at a moderate or high intensity.
Significance: For people who don't exercise, the study found that simple aerobic activity like taking the stairs instead of the elevator or taking a brisk walk for short distances rather than taking the car, paired with a healthy diet, can significantly boost metabolic rate and help avoid weight gain, or promote weight loss.

Study supports mammogram screening in young women

Location of study: U.S.
Study subjects: Patients with invasive breast cancers diagnosed in Boston between 1990 and 1999
Results: A new analysis has found that most deaths from breast cancer occur in younger women who do not receive regular mammograms, according to a report in CANCER, a journal of the American Cancer Society. The results of a study conducted at Harvard Medical School in Boston indicate that regular screening before age 50 should be encouraged.
Significance: Study co-author Dr. Blake Cady, professor of surgery emeritus, comments, "The biological nature of breast cancer in young women is more aggressive, while breast cancer in older women tends to be more indolent. This suggests that less frequent screening in older women, but more frequent screening in younger women, may be more biologically based, practical and cost-effective."

Ultrasounds can pick up tumors that mammograms may miss in younger women because of the density of their breast tissue.

No sleep can lead to bad eating habits

Location of study: Sweden
Study subjects: 14 normal-weight men
Results: As little as one night's sleep deprivation makes a person more likely to purchase food that's higher in calories and buy greater quantities of food, according to a new study published in the journal Obesity. The study also found that sleep deprivation led to increased blood levels of ghrelin, a hormone that increases hunger. However, there was no correlation between individual ghrelin levels and buying more food during a shopping trip, indicating that other personal factors come into play, too.
Significance: "We hypothesized that sleep deprivation's impact on hunger and decision making would make for the 'perfect storm' with regard to shopping and food purchasing, leaving individuals hungrier and less capable of employing self-control and higher-level decision-making processes to avoid making impulsive, calorie-driven purchases," says the study's first author, Colin Chapman, MSc, of Uppsala University.

Horoscope

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. A break will do you good. Altering your living arrangements will be emotional but beneficial.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. Avoid high-pressure situations today. Appeal to the emotional side of anyone making unreasonable demands. Make adjustments to the connections that are standing in the way.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. Use your energy wisely. Take advantage of any chance you get to increase your worth. Set a strict budget.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan 20. Love, romance and adventure should be included on your to-do list. Broaden your outlook and explore.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb 18. Let your emotions take over when it comes to dealing with a domestic situation. Don't be stingy with your take on matters. A new source of income encourages you.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. Get out and get involved today. Meeting with people interested in unusual activities will enrich your life.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. There's no need to act with undue haste. You have more options than you realize, so examine the pros and cons.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. Aggressive action will get the job done but also create opposition. Work secretively until you have everything in place. It may take longer, but you will avoid discord.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. Call in favors and you will get a job done quickly. If you let those who helped you in on the fun, you'll develop a support network.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. Strive for excellence in whatever you pursue. If you get outside your comfort zone, you could learn some valuable information.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. Don't leave anything to chance. Make moves that are unexpected, yet shrewd. Surprise will give you the advantage.

America unified by 9/11

As a firsthand witness to the destruction of the World Trade Center, my lingering memory is less about the perpetrators' callous disregard of human life than the unification of my fellow New Yorkers. Individual walls came down and the playing field, from CEO to messenger, was leveled as New Yorkers pulled together and opened up in a heart warming manner. The tragedy of 9/11 left me with the indelible feeling that in times of crisis, our nation will move beyond our differences and remind the world why we are named the "United" States.

Agent Orange not meant as weapon

Re: 'US policy is full of gas' (Metro, Sept. 10) In his letter, Calvin Davis asserts that the United States used chemical weapons (Agent Orange) in Vietnam from 1961 to 1971, killing 400,000 people and causing 500,000 birth defects. First, Agent Orange was not used as a chemical weapon, but rather as an herbicide/defoliant to deny the VC large swaths of the countryside. It was not until later that the debilitating effect of Agent Orange on human beings was determined. If Agent Orange had been intended as a chemical weapon, the U.S. would not have exposed large numbers of its own soldiers to it, as was the case. Incidentally, that the U.S. government refused to take responsibility for the health problems suffered by Vietnam veterans exposed to Agent Orange is scandalous, but it is not related to use of "chemical weapons."

Interleague start

Phillies open '14 in Texas

The Phillies will open the 2014 baseball season on the road March 31 at Rangers Ballpark in Arlington, Texas. The team's home opener is slated for April 7 against the Milwaukee Brewers at Citizens Bank Park. The Phils play 19 of their final 29 games on the road.

CHIP KELLY IS HERE TO SAVE PHILLY SPORTS

Chip Kelly is the answer to our city's prayer, a man who follows no rules and suffers no fools. He is a visionary in a city blinded by 53 years of football futility. He is the best reason — if not the only reason — to fall back in love with sports right now in Philadelphia.

There is no way to overstate what Kelly did in his NFL debut Monday night in Washington, because there is no precedent for it. The Eagles' coach masterminded a 33-27 victory that instantaneously brought new hope to a fan base ravenous for success.

On a grander scale, it provided a surge of optimism for a city haunted by the recent failures of the Flyers, Sixers and Phillies — and the assaults on our collective psyche provided by Andrew Bynum, Ilya Bryzgalov and Ruben Amaro Jr. After so many disappointments, we have a winner in town.

What made Kelly's debut so extraordinary was, well, just about everything — from his hell-bent style of running plays to his cocksure strategies to his passionate style on the sideline. Since he arrived here from Oregon eight months ago, he has won over even his biggest critics by offering honest answers to simple questions and by working tirelessly to win football games.

The voice of Philly sports

ANGELO CATALDI

I spoke to Kelly 11 hours before his NFL debut and was dumb enough to ask him to share his innermost thoughts about his first game. He snorted an unintelligible response, probably because I was asking him to waste his time. Kelly doesn't gaze at his belly button and ponder the meaning of life. He's too busy designing plays and plotting ways to beat the next opponent.

For example, Mike Shanahan is one of the best coaches in the NFL, and he's got a pair of championship rings to prove it. The Washington coach also had a 15-4 record in openers during his Hall of Fame career.

Cataldi's take

Chip Kelly is more than just a tactical wizard. He makes everybody around him better.

When given time, no one outsmarts Shanahan. Kelly was aware of none of these facts, of course, so he hung 33 points on the legend in the first 32 minutes of the game.

Kelly is more than just a tactical wizard. He makes everybody around him better. Mike Vick looks like he's 25 again. LeSean McCoy had the game of his life. DeSean Jackson isn't just a deep threat anymore. Mychal Kendricks went from MIA to MVP. Trent Cole is visible again. And every one of them believes in the new coach. They love the guy.

Everybody loves Chip Kelly because he is exactly what we have lacked for more years than we can calculate. He is smarter than the rest and equal to the task. Even after just one game, there is no denying the new direction he is charting for a city desperate to celebrate a championship in the sport we love the most.

Welcome to Philadelphia, Chip Kelly. You got here just in time.

Chip Kelly arrived on the Philadelphia sports scene just in time.

Opinion

'Worldwide Leader' owes Philadelphia an apology

ESPN owes Philadelphia an apology. The blowhards who work on that overrated TV network need to open next Sunday's NFL pregame show by acknowledging how insulting they were to the most passionate sports city in America.

For what, you ask? For these reasons and more.

First, for picking the Redskins to throttle the Eagles in the season opener on Monday night. Hey, it's fine if 17 of ESPN's 18 so-called experts chose Washington to beat the Birds. Everybody makes a mistake. But when the network's weekly magazine boldly states that the Skins will win by a score of 41-0, well, that's not a prediction, that's an indictment. When you're that wrong, you can't just pretend it didn't happen.

Second, for rooting shamelessly for the Redskins while the Eagles were stunning the football world. How many times did we need to hear broadcasters Mike Tirico and Jon Gruden beg Skins quarterback Robert Griffin III to come out of his funk and launch a comeback? They should have been thrilled the Eagles were bringing an excitement to Monday Night Football unlike anything since Dandy Don Meredith and Howard Cosell.

We're waiting for an apology.
GETTY IMAGES

And third, for ignoring their own paid referee analyst, Gerry Austin, who clearly stated that the Eagles got robbed on the first touchdown of the game because the refs erroneously ruled that Mike Vick had thrown a backward pass. If you're going to employ an expert, why then ignore him when his opinion doesn't fit your own network bias?

This just in: With rivals at Fox, NBC and CBS looking to topple the sports giant, ESPN needs the Eagles more right now than the Eagles need ESPN. So drop to your knees, boys, and make it good.

ANGELO CATALDI

Cataldi. It's time for Phillies to finally show Dubee the door

Rich Dubee's obnoxious, incompetent presence on the Phillies has somehow survived the implosion of the team and the recent dismissal of his enabler, former manager Charlie Manuel.

So, why is the worst pitching coach in baseball still here?

Technically, Dubee is under contract for the rest of this endless season, but that doesn't mean the Phils have to keep him in place, a lame duck already complicating the life of new skipper Ryne Sandberg. If you haven't been paying attention (and who is these days?), you missed Dubee's latest escapade last week.

When Cole Hamels was warming up before his start on Sept. 2, he reported to Dubee that his back was bothering him. Now, anyone with a grain of common sense would have shut down the ace of the staff right there, but Dubee allowed the most important player in the organization to grind through seven innings and 89 pitches that night in a totally meaningless game.

Sandberg knew nothing about the back issue because Dubee chose not to tell the manager. How do we know this? Well, Sandberg was explicit after the game that night in saying there were no health concerns, pointing out repeatedly what Dubee had told him — that Hamels simply "hadn't warmed up well."

The next day, Dubee himself openly acknowledged that he knew of Hamels' back problems before the game. He never explained why he didn't bother to tell Sandberg. And, of course, nobody asked because one more display of the coach's misplaced arrogance just wasn't worth the effort.

Charlie Manuel is gone. So can't we finally be done with Rich Dubee, too? ANGELO CATALDI

Rich Dubee should have been fired at the same time Charlie Manuel was canned. / GETTY IMAGES

- Eagles GM Howie Roseman admitted he pushed for using a first-round pick on Danny Watkins. That's why Chip Kelly has final say on personnel.
- If you're looking for the biggest dumbbell of the week, it's a tie between New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie and Phillies outfielder Dom Brown. Both of these geniuses thought it was a great idea to flaunt their love of the Dallas Cowboys.

Forward thinking: Flyers reportedly ink Dan Cleary

The Flyers reportedly reached an agreement with forward Dan Cleary on a three-year, $8.25 million deal. Cleary will likely play on the third line. He scored nine goals in 48 games last season for the Detroit Red Wings. / GETTY IMAGES

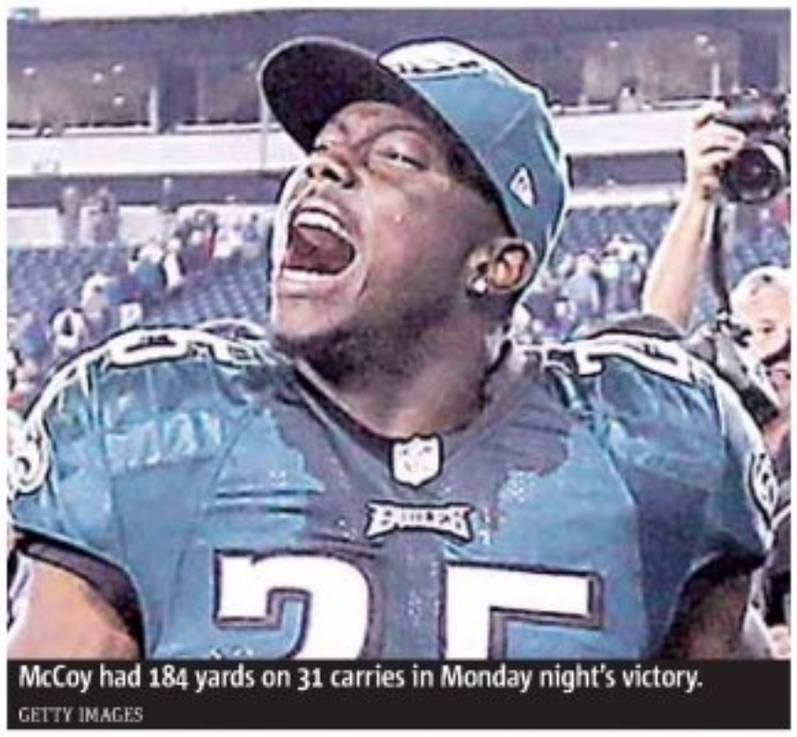
Kelly wants Birds to play even faster

NFL. Chip Kelly is pushing his offense to pick up the tempo even more this week against San Diego.



McCoy had 184 yards on 31 carries in Monday night's victory.
GETTY IMAGES

Chip Kelly wants to go faster.

As the football world was still dissecting and debating Kelly's NFL debut, the Eagles coach expressed concern that his offense was a tad too slow. Kelly, whose team ran a blistering 53 plays in the first half Monday night, wants his players to kick it up another notch.

"I felt like it was slow, to be honest with you. I'm not joking," Kelly said yesterday. "We've got to do a better job. We left the ball on the ground too much. We didn't get the ball to the officials. We could have sped things up from a process between plays. That's something we need to continue to work on."

Kelly's warp-speed offense was the talk of the sports world yesterday morning. It netted 443 total yards in a 33-27 victory, snapping the ball with less than 20 seconds coming off the play clock on most plays. Kelly said the key moving forward is to keep subbing guys in and out as a way to keep them fresh. LeSean McCoy carried 31 times and the ESPN cameras caught him on the sideline hunched over trying to catch his breath.

"We've got to do a better job of rotating some of those guys," Kelly said. "We've talked about it as a staff. We need to see Bryce [Brown] a little bit more. We need to get Chris [Polk] in the game. We need to rotate our receivers a little bit more. When you're going to play that many snaps, you've got to make sure you don't run your own team into the ground."

Eagles. Williams shines when the lights are brightest

Cary Williams broke his media silence Monday in more ways than one.

Williams was one of the best players on the field in Washington. The cornerback recorded a sack on a designed blitz early in the game, then added an interception and broke up a fourth-down pass play that essentially sealed the deal.

"I don't think that they were trying to come after me," Williams said. "Whether it's fourth down, whether it's second down, it doesn't matter. Every down, I'm going to go out there and give my best effort, and I was fortunate to come out on top this week."

Williams certainly looked the part of No. 1 cornerback. He spent a lot of time hovering around Pierre Garcon and held him to 64 yards receiving. Williams, who won a Super Bowl in Baltimore last season, was letting some of that championship experience rub off on the younger guys.

"I just think when the bright lights come on, you know who's going to come up," Williams said. "I've played some big games in my career, and I know the importance of taking the proper steps in practice to prepare for a game." MIKE GREGER

Cornering market

- Starting cornerback Bradley Fletcher left Monday's game with a concussion. He'll go through proper protocol before his status for Sunday is declared.
- The Eagles signed free agent corner Brandon Hughes after he had hand surgery.

Williams recorded a sack on Robert Griffin III.

Back to the future

Carlos Ruiz is set to hit free agency after the 2013 season. The catcher has spent his entire career — eight seasons — in red pinstripes. Ruiz admitted that he doesn't know if he'll be back next season.

- "They haven't said anything about next year," Ruiz told Phillies.com this past weekend. "We're open to talk whenever they want. At the same time, I'm happy and healthy. Everything depends on the Phillies. If they want to talk before the end of the season, we're OK with that. If not, we'll wait and see what we've got in the market. It's not in my hands, you know? The only thing I can do is continue to play and try to finish strong."

- Ruiz is also enjoying a resurgence at the plate after struggling early. He batted .333 in August with four home runs and 11 RBIs. His overall average is .280.

Catching a big break for the 2014 Phillies

MLB. Catcher position clouded as team looks to hit the restart button on this lost season.

Will Carlos Ruiz, a longtime fan favorite, be back in 2014? / GETTY IMAGES

As far as catching goes over recent years, the Phillies have been fortunate. Carlos Ruiz was a reliable field general during the greatest run in Phillies history. However, the catching post is up in the air for 2014.

Will the Phillies bring back the aging Ruiz? What's the plan for Erik Kratz next year? How about Cameron Rupp? The rookie made his major-league debut against the San Diego Padres. Rupp caught Tyler Cloyd, a familiar battery mate from their days together at Triple-A Lehigh.

"I figured that was a good match," Ryne Sandberg said. "They've caught each other most of this year. It's a chance to see him with a pitcher he knows. That way he goes into the game feeling good. I'm anxious to see where he's at."

Rupp was with Double-A Reading at the start of the season. He hit .245 and was moved up after Tommy Joseph suffered a concussion. Rupp hit .269 at Lehigh and handled pitchers well.

"I didn't want to see Tommy get hurt," Rupp said. "That's not what you want. But I had an opportunity and you want to take advantage of opportunities."

Perhaps the third-round pick from the 2010 draft can make an impact next year.

"The Phillies need to do something next season behind the plate," a NL scout said. "That's a critical position. Ruiz has come on but how much has he got left in the tank? Why not take a look at some young guys there when you're not in the race? It'll be interesting what they do next season."
